Paper♥♥Mate®

We know how important it is to have space to truly be yourself – to be, to grow, and to discover with no expectations.

At Paper Mate, we believe in celebrating who you are today and who you'll become tomorrow because, like any good work, we're all a work in progress.

We've seen firsthand how a small start becomes something wonderfully rewarding -- how scribbles become thoughts, how sketches become drawings, how doodles become ideas. We find joy in creating and evolving (in writing and in life) because it's what makes the experience that much more meaningful.

That's why at Paper Mate, we go heart-to-heart in our support of meeting you where you are. Our unique style and distinct performance mean we're a partner you can count on as your personal story unfolds.

Paper Mate - Feel the Joy

Sharpie®

We know what it's like to get excited about an idea and map out in our minds how to make it happen. We also know bringing your thoughts to life takes commitment - it's about visualizing that bold ambition and being intentional about the choices to get there, step by step.

At Sharpie, we believe you must dare greatly to have the biggest impact, and we know this to be true because we've seen it ourselves -- in boardrooms, in classrooms, in studios. Sometimes, that means experimenting with what could be, even when it's outside your comfort zone.

That's why, at Sharpie, we don't just offer products, but a range of solutions fit for your purpose across project types, writing styles and preferences.

From personal to public, school to business, functional to creative, start to finish, paper to digital, Sharpie's versatility, consistent performance and bold finish turn your vision into reality.

Sharpie - From Idea to Impact

It's amazing how imaginative a child can be, yet we see their attention drawn in by the gravitational pull of screens. As parents and teachers, we scour the internet for ways to feed their minds with productive play - searching for hands-on tactile activities that engage them in the moment with the wondrous act of making.

At Elmer's, we see our product as not just an ingredient but as an integral part of what bonds ideas together. We make construction paper hearts into a card for mom; we turn a pile of popsicle sticks into a cabin in the woods. Without us, glittery purple slime cannot exist (sorry not sorry), and model ships would fall into the sea.

From classrooms to kitchen tables, Elmer's is not just an essential building block for your kids' (or your) latest projects, it's the stuff that makes the making happen.

Results

you present the data in a straightforward manner with no analysis of the curved or the biological meaning of the data (these comments are reserved for the discussion). However, you should interpret the data (preferably statistically), highlight patterns, correlations, and generalizations that emerge. Also write down any conclusions that arise from your analysis.

Results should be naturally organized into tables and/or figures (graphs). Tables must have a table number and figures must be accompanied by a caption (below the figure). Tables and figures must be referred to in the text (see below for an example of how to do this). Text must be given first, before tables and figures on a page. If the text is not clear for the particular type of data, the text should be included in both table and figure format. Unreduced, unsummarized, or unannotated text is not appropriate to include in tables and figures. The text of the Results section should describe the data and draw attention to significant data discussed in the text. The reader from reviewing the table and figure should be able to see the results and experimental design.

The number of bacterial colonies increased up to 4.0 x 10⁸ CFU/ml. The greatest amount of growth occurred between 35°C and 45°C. For example, Figure 1 refers to the graph in the Results section. The figure (graph) may contain numerous values from 0° to 60° C, but the author did not include all values. Generalizations are made concerning the results. The figure illustrates ("a picture is worth a thousand words").

Use of Tables and Figures

Tables and figures summarize data in a form that allows a reader to see correlations, relationships, or patterns that are important. Tables that show specific values are shown (i.e. means, standard deviations, standard deviations) when it is more important to show trends or relationships of data. However, must be met:

1) Refer to the tables as Tables; refer to all other items (graphs, pictures, drawings) as Figures.
